Beautification, business of the year on the agenda

There was a full house at Wednesday's Chamber of Commerce meeting, as 19 members discussed plans for downtown beautification, recognition of the 1999 business of the year and the upcoming Christmas Extravaganza.

Manon Joice of the Downtown Beautification Committee handed out questionnaires to try to determine priorities for the beautification project. She noted that some people feel that painting building fronts is a top priority, but this could involve up to 30 buildings and might be a "band-aid idea," whereas a two-year beautification plan might do a more in-depth job of enhancing the downtown area. Moving an enlarged and enhanced tourist information centre to the south end of main street, installing loudspeakers for music around the downtown area, placing park-style benches at strategic locations and giving streets names instead of numbers are other suggestions which have been put forward. "Tell us what you want done," she said, "and once that is established, we can establish a budget."

Sources of funding for the project have still not been determined, but potential grants are being looked into.

business award, in order to give all businesses in town a chance to be honored, no matter what their size. Posters with a supply of nomination forms to be filled out and returned to the Chamber will be up in local businesses later this week, and the forms are to be returned to the Chamber by November 1. Chamber members are also being urged to nominate worthy businesses for the annual award and will receive forms at the next meeting.

Friday, December 10 has been set as the date for the 1999 Christmas Extravaganza. Planning for this annual pre-holiday shopping event will start in the very near future.

Mayor Ed Buck was on hand to update the Chamber on the Northern Lights Library System's search for new headquarters, and to urge the Chamber to get on board if Elk

Elk Point on NLLS short list

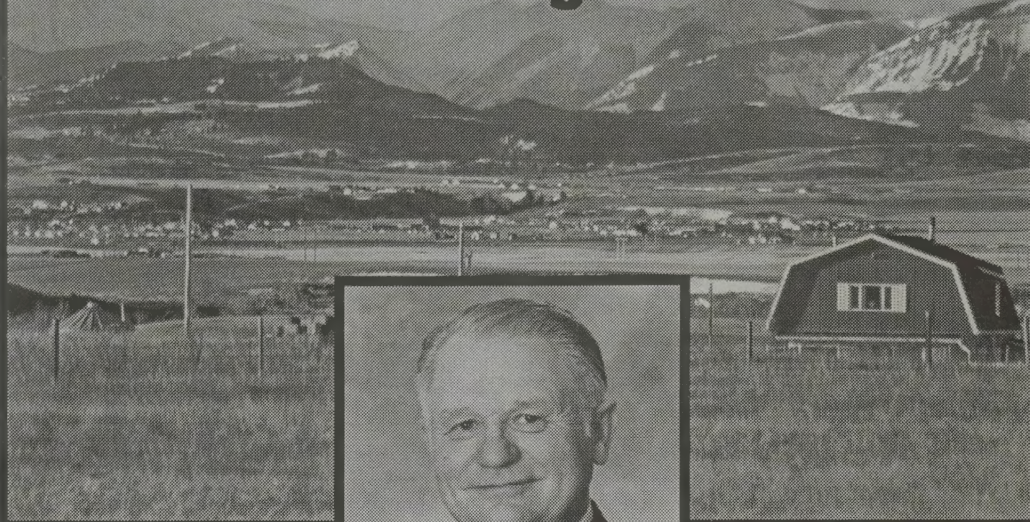

Elk Point is one of four communities which have been short listed by the Northern Lights Library System in their search for a new headquarters location. St. Paul, Vermilion and Vegreville also made the cut from 17 applications.

The four towns will each be given an opportunity to make a presentation to the Northern Lights board of directors at a meeting in Spruce Grove on October 23, before the board makes their decision.

The Town of Elk Point and the Elk Point Chamber of Commerce are currently fine tuning a presentation to be given at that meeting, in hopes of keeping the System's headquarters in Elk Point.

agriculture and food WEEK

Agriculture is Growing More than Food. It's Growing Alberta.

Across our country, urban and rural Canadians are celebrating the harvest during Agriculture and Food Week. Here in Alberta, there's a lot to be thankful for.

On the eve of the new millennium, the agriculture and food industry is growing, and creating a sustainable future through diversification, innovation and hard work. And, the effort is paying handsome dividends.

In a business environment that is challenged with slumping commodity prices and global marketing issues, Albertans are reacting the way they always do – creatively, positively with foresight and with hard work.

Today, the agriculture and food industry is Alberta's leading manufacturing sector in terms of employment and product shipped. Growth in the sector averaged 6% to 10% throughout the decade – and it's still going strong. Exports have grown by 90% and, today, one in every three Alberta jobs directly or indirectly relate to agriculture and food.

There's a great deal to celebrate this week. As you drive down our highways this fall, give a nod of thanks to those who are growing more than food. Indeed, they're Growing Alberta.

Sincerely,

The Honourable Ty Lund

Agriculture and Food Week puts harvest back in Thanksgiving

Agriculture and Food Week, a celebration of agriculture and all it means to the province, kicked off Sunday, October 10 and runs until Saturday, October 16. According to Paul Murphy, the timing of Agriculture and Food Week is anything but coincidental.

"Thanksgiving means a lot more than a day off work," says Murphy, Executive Director of the Growing Alberta program, partners with Alberta Agriculture, Food and Rural Development in organizing Agriculture and Food Week activities.

"Thanksgiving is about the bounty of the harvest, so it's entirely appropriate to pause at this time of year, and reflect on the quality food supply we enjoy, and spare a thought for the people who produce it." Murphy notes that the agrifood industry – ranging from farmers to food processors to retailers and more – is one of the province's largest employers, generating billions of dollars in economic activity every year.

"Just as important, the agriculture and food industry is at the forefront of ensuring environmental sustainability," he says. "Agriculture and food is a growth industry, where research and innovation are giving us new and better food products all the time."

Growing Alberta is an industry initiative designed to create greater awareness about agriculture's contribution to Alberta's economy, environment and way of life.

The only thing ranchers want to throw in our streams.

Clean water is essential to life. Most people remember that occasionally, but ranchers are aware of it constantly. Guarding the purity of water isn't an option. It's a necessity – for our families, livestock and neighbours downstream. That's why we support the Cows & Fish Project, a program that makes it possible to raise cattle while preserving aquatic life and streamside vegetation. By doing this, we're living up to our values – like a cleaner environment. We're also looking after our favourite fishing holes and, like any good angler, we're not about to reveal their locations! A Canadian Thanksgiving time

By Deanna Easthope
FCSS Director

We have all just finished our traditional Canadian Thanksgiving weekend. Yes, it was a time for families to get together and enjoy each other's company. After all, the most important thing we are thankful for is our own families. Yes, they do come first.

Thanksgiving is also the time we think about all the things we were and are thankful for - from the food we eat to the freedom we enjoy and to the beautiful country we live in. Our lists can be quite long. We are all so very fortunate.

Our greatest "sin" can be one of ingratitude. This reminds me of a story of Fran Tarkenton, a former Minnesota Viking quarterback who once called a play that required him to block onrushing tacklers.

NFL quarterbacks almost never block. They're usually vastly outweighed by defenders, so blocking exposes them to the risk of severe injury.

But the team was behind, and a surprise play was needed. Tarkenton went in to block, and the runner scored a touchdown. The Vikings won the game.

Watching the game films with the team the next day, Tarkenton expected a big pat on the back for what he'd done.

It never came.

After the meeting, Tarkenton approached his coach and asked, "You saw my block, didn't you, Coach? How come you didn't say anything about it?"

The Coach replied, "Sure, I saw the block. It was great. But you're always working hard out there, Fran. I figured I didn't have to tell you." "Well," Tarkenton, replied, "if you ever want me to block again, you do!"

I like this story because it reminds me of each one of us. Expressing thanks is so important, and quite often, we all forget to say thank you.

Gratitude comes from the root word gratus, which means pleasing. When you are grateful, then you are pleased, not by the thing, but by the gratitude. In other words, in order to feel pleased, be grateful. Yes, the two words go together. Our Canadian Thanksgiving weekend was a time to express both feelings.

■ Outstanding achievement

Gary Krawchuk to receive international award

Former Elk Point resident Gary P. Krawchuk (son of Harry and Alice Krawchuk), has been selected to receive the top honor in the Association of School Business Officials (ASBO) International's Pinnacle Awards Program. The program is sponsored by Virco Manufacturing Corporation, which honors school business officials for their outstanding practices or new ideas that result in a significant contribution to school entities, the school business management profession, or an ASBO organization.

Gary Krawchuk, Secretary-Treasurer of the Northern Lights School Division No. 69 in Bonnyville, Alberta will be the first Canadian ever to receive this prestigious Pinnacle Award. Krawchuk will receive the "Pinnacle of Excellence" award, which is the program's highest honor, on Monday, October 18, 1999 in Orlando, Florida at ASBO International's annual conference. Krawchuk's determination, problem-solving skills, and creativity made his vision to develop a wireless web system for his school division a reality.

The project resulted in the development of the world's largest wireless web system in education that connects more than 6000 students and 800 staff in 25 schools. The School

GARY KRAWCHUK

Division now has a fast, reliable and cost effective system that links more than 2200 computers which all have the capability to run simultaneously on the Internet so that the students and staff of the Division can be connected to the rest of the world. Since Northern Lights School Division No. 69 is Alberta's second largest rural school division, covering more than 5714 square miles, the task was challenging to say the least.

As the Pinnacle of Excellence award recipient, Krawchuk will receive complimentary registration, accommodation and round trip airfare for him and his wife to the ASBO International conference in Orlando on October 18, as well as a cheque for $5000 and a crystal Pinnacle of Excellence award. In addition, the Northern Lights School Division will receive Virco school furniture valued at $5000.

Gary and Debbie Krawchuk will be accompanied to Orlando by other school dignitaries and officials from the Northern Lights School Division, as well as Daniel Krawchuk, representative from St. Paul Communications, who worked along with Gary from the inception of the project.

By Manon Joice

The following is a true story. It took place in Ontario, where I was beginning my nursing career. This experience remains one of my fondest.

I was newly employed at the health care centre on this particular night, when I had completed my rounds including bed checks. During this time, a kind elderly lady with a very sweet voice asked me to turn off a light from the other side of her room. She explained to me the bright light hurt her eyes. Of course, I did as she requested and we chatted for a few moments before I returned to my station. Once there, I was confronted by another staff member. She asked me why I had turned off the light in room nine. Not thinking it was anything serious, I explained that the patient had requested I turn it off. Natalie, the staff member, knowing I was new, said I must be mistaken. By this time a third staff person approached. I recanted my story, the patient in room nine requested I turn the light off, we chit-chatted a bit and what's the big deal anyway? Natalie stated, "The big deal, Manon, is she's blind and has been for several years." All three of us rushed back to the room. The patient was clear headed and could obviously see. She was able to describe each of us including our hair color. She began to tell us about a party she had once gone to. It was clear, it had been one of her fondest memories. We talked with her for quite some time that night.

Unfortunately, by the next morning she had lost her sight again. She also lost the energy to converse. As we had expected, our patient passed away later that week. She was 98.

Many of us who have been with the dying, recant similar stories. It's not unusual for persons to regain their senses before passing. I, myself, like to think of it as that one last answered prayer.

■ Nutrition notes

The Internet - fact or fiction?

By Linda Fox, RD
Elk Point Health Centre

The Internet is growing faster than all other technologies that have preceded it. Radio existed for 38 years before it had 50 million listeners, and TV took 13 years to reach that mark. The Internet crossed the line in just four years.

Are you among those millions of "surfers"? If so, there may be times when you wonder about the reliability of the information you find on certain sites.

Nutrition quackery is widespread in cyberspace and takes several forms: questionable food and products; misleading diet, nutrition, and health information; testimonials masquerading as scientific evidence; and questionable credentials. Chat forums on cancer, chronic fatigue syndrome, and weight loss are prominent places for nutrition quackery to be found.

Some guidelines and tips to use in recognizing false information:

- author does not list credentials.
- author lists credentials or organizations that are unfamiliar.
- misuse of medical or technical terms.
- article refers to 'cases' or 'evidence' without listing any references.
- studies listed are not reproduced or involve a very small number of participants.
- claims that a product is a miraculous 'cure all' or a deadly "cause all"
- exaggerated claims
- use of personal testimonials - remember, what works for one person may not be effective for you.
- promotes paranoia by playing on fears or alluding to conspiracies.
- promotes aids, gadgets, books or supplements that the authors are selling.

Choose reputable information by beginning your search with a government, educational or association site. These sites can lead you to sound, science based information on nutrition and health, rather than limiting you to search engine offerings. An added bonus is that flashy Internet advertising is kept to a minimum.

Some examples of government sites are Health Canada at www.hc-sc.gc.ca; Agriculture and Agri-Food Canada at www.agr.ca and Government of Canada at www.canada.gc.ca.

Practical information can be accessed through association Web sites. For example, check out the Canadian Diabetes Association at www.diabetes.ca for information on diabetes.

Registered Dietitians provide safe, reliable information and are the preferred resource for nutrition advice. Log on to the Dietitians of Canada website at www.dietitians.ca.

For more information, contact your local Registered Dietitian.

what's NEWS at the LIBRARY?

Library technology goes way beyond stamps!

By Karina Mitchell
Librarian

The world of technology in libraries goes beyond stamps! I learned this at the annual technology in libraries conference, Netspeed '99. This year's conference was held in Edmonton and was a fountain of information. With best-selling authors for keynote speakers and speakers from around the world, there was a lot to learn about the role of technology in libraries. The sessions I attended included one on monthly chores and other utilities for keeping the computers at the Library purring happily as well as learning how to search the Internet more effectively and what best to buy for the Library in the area of technology. Then there was the really fun part -- the food, the free stuff and getting together with other librarians and sharing our experiences.

The food was worth getting there early for and as I type this article, I am using my new mouse pad and wrist mat. And the most useful learning took place at the coffee breaks where we Librarians could discuss and compare our different libraries and give advice on issues we may also be dealing with.

So I would say the conference was a success in that I definitely came back with much I can use to improve the library.

Two prominent murders within days of each other in a Midwestern city. Stella Marz, the head of the prosecutor's homicide unit, is on the case. But the deaths lead her into a labyrinth where her personal and professional lives become dangerously intertwined in Dark Lady by Richard North Patterson.

Since the end of World War II we have seen a shift, some would say an inversion, of human ethics. We no longer behave the way our forefathers did.

Today mothers can kill their unborn children, and government will not only sanction it but also pay the expense. Men marry men and women, women and society recognizes these as legitimate marriages. Couples live together outside the covenant of marriage and are given most, if not all, of the privileges of married people. Students swear on school grounds and in the classroom. Teachers have lost their authority and our police are despised and scorned on our streets. Justice is a thing of the past and has been replaced by a legal system that seeks at all costs to declare the guilty innocent and the victim of crime is ignored. The murder no longer forfeits his life but is released into society within a few years.

Where are we going? What will the New Millennium bring? How can we determine right and wrong? Are all ethics relative and in a state of flux?

These are questions many
